change existing glass balustrade to front first floor with a light iron railing

The existing house is a 'Neo Gothic style' of architecture completed in 2002. The Crouch End Conservation Area Character Appraisal, September 2010, point 10.32 page 115 describe the Gothic style house as making a positive contribution to the conservation area.

The proposed light gauge iron railing with its light detailing is in a new Gothic style which remains discrete but more sympathetic to the existing house than that of the existing glass balustrade.
